To The Voters Of Appomattox County
The Democrats of Virginia will nominate a candidate for Governor on August 2nd next. There are now five candidates in the field. There are a number of issues vital to the welfare of the People of Virginia, to be considered and decided on this campaign. We are convinced, from the standpoint of training and long experience, both in the House and Senate of Virginia, that Hon. John S. Battle is the best qualified candidate in the field. He has the endorsement of most of the State and National leaders in Virginia, and we sincerely believe it will be to the best interest of the people of Appomattox County to support him, and trust it may be our privilege and pleasure to do so.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh
Remember How We Talked?
It went like this at the Hooper's the other night. Hap's eighteen-year-old daughter is talking about a real gone guy—solid—out of this world, but def."
"Now what kind of language is that?" Hap barks. "Can't she speak English?"
"I'll translate it for you," Ma Hooper says, "in the language of the twenties, when you were about twenty years old. She simply means this fellow is the 'cat's whiskers.' Remember how are used to talk sometimes?" Hap went back to reading his newspaper.
From where I sit, it's easy to criticize the other person when we don't take a good long look at ourselves. Sure, there'll always be some differences. I'm fond of a temperate glass of beer and maybe you would prefer ginger ale—but let's just live and let live. Because when we go out of our way to find things to find fault with in others, chances are they can find a few in us, too.

GOOD MANAGING GOES WITH CHICKS

As you plan your poultry-raising activities for the year ahead, keep these thoughts in mind:

Good management and poor chicken, taken together, usually produce only fair returns. Poor management and good chicks will probably return only mediocre profits or possibly a net loss. But, good management combined with good chicks almost always will produce superior results, giving extra eggs, extra profits, and a better flock health.

Selection of high-quality chicks in the beginning is a matter of great importance, but sound management is equally vital. There are several simple, yet oft-forgotten rules of management to follow in raising chicks. Here are a few examples.

Repair Brooder House

Make necessary repairs on brooder houses well in advance of the time you expect your chicks. Eliminate any drafts from building defects and make the houses easy to heat. Insulate houses against the cold.

Thoroughly clean and disinfect all previously-used houses and equipment. Use a good disinfectant with a high phenol coefficient. Scrape away dirt and scrub interiors and equipment with hot water and soap.

Always start your brooder stoves well in advance of the day you get your chicks. Test them, make any needed repairs, and heat the houses to aid the disinfecting.

Baby chicks often do not "catch onto" drinking and eating right at the start. As you take them from the box and place them beneath the hover, dip the beak of each into the water. Place feed on egg-case flats for first few days.

These are merely a few of the management pointers which your hatcheryman can give you. Ask him for advice and follow it carefully to raise good chicks.

MICE POISONING ADVISED IN ORCHARDS

Poisoning to lower the number of orchard mice, now at a high level in Virginia, has been advised by A. H. Teske, fruit specialist at V. P. I.

Teske says mild weather during the fall and winter has been favorable for breeding of orchard mice, and that they are more numerous than usual.

His suggestions:

Cut apple pieces 1-2 inch square at ends and 1 1-2 inches long.

Place cut apple pieces in enamel pan; sift zinc phosphide powder over the apples, and stir until the pieces are coated uniformly.

Use zinc phosphide at the rate of one level teaspoonful for each quart of cut apple pieces.

Place treated bait in active runways, with three to four placings for each tree space. Use two pieces of bait in each place.

Bait fence rows, rock outcrops, waste areas and vacant tree paces.

Put out bait early in the morning of a clear, warm day.

Zinc phosphide is available through county agents or from the department of horticulture, V. P. I., Blacksburg.

WILD TURKEY POPULATION IN VA.

Dr. Henry S. Mosby, in charge of a Virginia Cooperative Wildlife Unit, estimates the wild turkey population of Virginia at 20,000 and the annual kill at slightly under 6,100 birds. It is a question as to whether the turkey population is holding its own or is slightly on the decline, he says.
